Print Report Summary

Pugs are usually good with children and often are friendly dogs.

Stubborn tendencies may be lessened by using reward-based training involving small treats and favorite toys.

Need regular activity, however require less exercise than other breeds. Can participate in dog sports such as agility and rally or competitive obedience.

DID YOU KNOW?

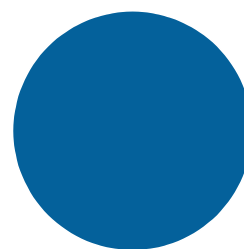

That these cute little charmers have such wrinkly faces, you might think they are quite an ancient breed. Pugs date back to the Ming Dynasty, in fact, which reigned from around 1368 to 1644 B.C. They were kept as pets by Tibetan monks before being brought to Japan. In the late 16th and early 17th centuries, East India Trading Company sailors brought Pugs back to Europe where they became the official dog of the Dutch Royal Navy. Their popularity soon spread to Europe and even Queen Victoria loved them. Pugs have travelled far across the globe and today, we wouldn't send these playful and affectionate dogs back home for all the tea in China.

Should be considered individual animals. Because each is a product of its environment and handling, they may exhibit different traits and behaviors than those listed here.
